'Don't Vote' Campaign

When Adolf Hitler was the ruling dictator of Germany, before he launched World War II and sealed his own death warrant, one of his favorite schemes was to conduct what he called plebiscites. These presumably were elections to disclose the will of the people but the catch was that the people always had to vote the way he wanted them to.

After a few of these elections. the Germans labeled them "ja plebiscites." This meant that the only way the people could vote was "yes."

Orville Freeman, United States secretary of agriculture, is now staging a "ja plebiscite" for wheat growers. On August 30, according to a Freeman decree, wheat growers will go to the polls to select the minimum government support price of wheat for the 1963 crop. Unless they vote the way Freeman wants them to, they will be given a smashing economic jolt.

Thus far Freeman has not reached the point at which Hitler arrived. Germans who voted against the Hitler program faced the stark prospect of no jobs and no food, since all jobs were in the hands of the government and the food had to be obtained with government stamps. That, apparently, is a purpose for which Freeman is striving, for he has made it evident frequently that he is impatient with letting the people have anything to say about the govern-

For a number of years and especially since Freeman took office, farmers have been showing an increasing dislike of government farm control programs. Nevertheless, a majority of the wheat growers who cast ballots undoubtedly will choose the highest price, which will be calculated around a maximum of $1.82 a bushel, tied to marketing quotas. This is what farm organization experts in the capital believe will happen.

The reason this outcome is predicted is that the alternative choice presented by Freeman is economically unattractive. The choice is between a price support of $1.82 a bushel tied to government-assigned marketing quotas or about $1.22 a bushel with no quotas. This is about a 50 per cent differential in the market price.

Thus, Freeman gets his "yes" plebiscite just about as inexorably as did Hitler with his terror.

As a result of Freeman's formula of "alternatives," it is believed that perhaps as many as 75 per cent of the eligible wheat growers will not vote, many of them staying away in protest against the "rigged choices."

Freeman ordered the referendum now-since winter wheat-planting time is near-under "temporary provisions" of the present law. He was forced to do this because his proposed new farm bill, which would have virtually authorized government seizure of farms, was gutted in the house.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, most powerful farm organization in the United States, is emphatically opposing any new farm legislation.

Should wheat growers register a significant resistance to the current referendum, either by voting against the higher program or by refusing to cast a ballot, it might aid in discouraging further inroads by the government into farm operations. Such discouragement would have to be effective through congress, inasmuch as Freeman undoubtedly would carry on a program as ruthless as possible, no matter what position the farmers might take.

Counties And Schools

Tennessee's state board of education has come up with a statement on how many pupils are necessary in a school district in order to make education through the 12th grade adequate. The figure it arrived at was 1.500, and it holds the school system will not be satisfactory with less than that number.

This is something for school officials in other states to think about. The trend throughout the whole country for a good many years has been toward consolidation of schools and the elimination of small ones, the contention being that the smaller schools are more costly per pupil and that the students cannot receive the advantages accorded those in larger schools. There seems little reason to doubt that this is true.

Louisiana has been in the forefront in the consolidation of schools and there are few small ones left. Nearly all the schools in this state now are large and are a credit to the communities in which they are

Insiders attribute this strange Powell attitude to his belief that Murphy is headed for defeat, and the desire to prevent that from being tagged as a repudiation of Powell.

Murphy aspires to be the first Catholic elected to the Senate from New Hampshire, and is making a strong play for that vote. Young and likable, he is campaigning hard, and using to the utmost his senatorial free mailing privilege to bombard the voters. But he lacks the organized political backing of his rivals, and is definitely trailing them

Mrs. Bridges, second wife of her late husband, is attractive, brainy, forceful and, on occasion. razor - tongued. She has a bustling campaign organization, formed around ardent partisans of her husband, and is counting heavily on the women's vote. But there are significant indications she won't get as much of it as she needs.

At the start, Mrs. Bridges vigorously tried to drum up a "sympathy vote" because Powell didn't appoint her to her husband's seat. But this stratagem got nowhere. Now she is stressing that she is a 'Styles Bridges Republican" and that the great issue facing the country is "Godless Communism abroad, and more centralized all-powerful government at home." The polls indicate this campaign line also isn't wowing the voters.

Merrow has labor backing, and is aggressively after the Catholic vote. That is supremely important, as New Hampshire's Catholic population is now 45 per Merrow has been a congressman since 1943, and has high committee seniority there. He is risking that in the confident hope he can win the senatorial nomination - and he has a first-rate chance to do it.

A young former banker, whose paternal grandfather was Lincoln's Illinois campaign manager and whose father was a governor of New Hampshire, Bass belongs to the moderate wing of the GOP. He voted for President Kennedy's trade liberalization bill, and has supported other administration measures. This has brought considerable disapproval from oldline Republicans, but a lot of support from rank - and - file voters, particularly independents.

Six candidates are running for the Republican nomination for Merrow's House seat, and three for Bass'. Of the six aspirants for Merrow's place, three are former Bridges employes.

RALPH de TOLEDANO Tariff Confusion

Goldberg Says Trade Act Would Destroy Only 90,000 Jobs

The President has urged Congress to pass his cozily labelled "Trade Expansion Act" in order to stimulate U.S. business. Being neither an economist nor a fortune teller. I can't predict what effect this will have on American industry. Secretary of Labor Goldberg has said that it "only" destroy 90,000 jobs. But this, like other New Frontier talk, should be examined carefully. So I have been dissing into the facts on our current "reciprocal trade" laws.

The result: Utter confusion. Perhaps someone can explain to me where the logic lies in our present tariff policies-and how free trade will solve the problems now plaguing just one industry: cotton.

Cotton imports are on the upswing and in the first quarter of almost doubled. As a result, the cotton industry is in bad trouble. Profits stand at 2.4 percent-far less than what an investor could get just salting away his money in a savings bank.

To protect the grower, only bales of foreign cotton can be imported into this country per year. Yet the equivalent of 700,000 bales of cotton in the form of processed and manufactured textiles are imported, competing with the product of American mills and hurting the grow-

In order to cut down on U. S. cotton surpluses, the government sells it abroad for $42.50 less per bale than the price domestic mills must pay. Because 50 per-cent of the cost of textiles is in raw materials, foreign producers can sell their manufactured product in the U.S. market at prices with which our industryfaced by a 101 per cent rise in wages since the war--cannot compete. Before the U.S. textile industry even begins to produce, it must pay $383.6 million more for its raw materials than Japanese or other foreign manufacturers would have paid.

Going back to the beginning of the circle, the Federal government is buying cotton from the growers at an inflated price, selling it abroad at a loss in order to cut down on the surplus, and allowing this cotton to return to the United States in the form of finished goods. The sale of these goods cuts down the sale of the American product which in turn means that the textile industry buys less cotton from domestic growers. Therefore, the Federal government has to buy more cotton which it then sells abroadand the cycle begins all over again. Meanwhile, textile workers are losing their jobs.

Look at it from another stand point. Under foreign aid, the U. S. built modern textile plants in many underdeveloped areas. The argument offered in defense of this practice was that these areas couldn't buy U. S. textiles anyway, being too poor. By building the plants, the U.S. would provide work for people and the modern plants would produce cheaply for the home market The improved standard of living would provide a market for other U. S. manufactured goods and everybody would be happy.

What happened? The governments in these underdeveloped areas decided that by selling cotton goods in the U.S they would get valuable American dollars. So textile manufacturers workers have cast their bread upon the waters and gotten in return an economic black The same applies to steel producers who face competition from foreign rolling mills paid or with foreign aid dollars.)

Free trade, theoretically, is a fine thing. But it can only operate properly if other sectors of the economy are also free. With cotton price levels kept artificially high by government subsidy, economic laws cannot operate freely. Monkeying with the economy never works, as the experience with cotton shows. In 1929, the U.S. produced 15 million bales of cotton in 1960, the figure was roughly the same. Yet 1929's erop was grown on 43 million acres. 1960's on 14.5 million acres. Limiting acreage has not been a solution to the agricultural surplus. Every year bigger crops are grown on less land.

SYLVIA PORTER Seat Belt Story

Industry May Have Grossed $13.5 To $22.5 Million In Year

On the drive home from my first automobile accident fluckily a minor one) a few weeks ago. I stopped at the neighborhood garage and ordered a set of two front-seat belts installed immediately. For -- even before I heard the doctor who patched me up say that "belts would have saved one-third of those brought into this hospital with fatal auto injuries" -- I knew I wouldn't have been hurt as much as I was had a belt been holding me

Now, having bought my handsome red belts - to match the red upholstery of my white convertible, of course - and having discovered not only how much safer I feel but also how much the belts remind me to drive carefully - I have been looking into The Seat Belt Story. It's a surprisingly big business story with many unexpected aspects. Here

It is big business. The estimate the Auto Industries Highway Safety Committee is that, in 1961 alone, seat belt production totaled 4.5 million units. With manufacturers charging $3 to $5 a belt, this suggests the industry last year grossed between $13.5 and $22.5 million. And with the price to consumers ranging from $6 to $10 a belt installed, this means we might have spent up to $45 million for belts in the 12 months. We didn't spend nearly as much, though, for installations are still well below production.

But installation of seat belts is rapidly gaining momentum and this will continue. An active campaign to educate us on their use is being jointly pushed by auto industry, the American Medical Assn., the National Safety Council, the U.S. Public Health Service and, most importantly, the General Federation of Women's Clubs via its "Women's Crusade for Seat Belts."

The Advertising Council is backing installations with public service advertising messages. The decision by U. S. automakers to pre-punch front seat anchorage holes in all 1962 models has been a major spur. The American Equipment makes the Hickok brand seat belt for all Dodge Cars, reports it produced 80,000 belts in Dec ember last year against only 9,000 in January of 1961. Dodge alone says its dealers are ordering belts now at a rate 25 times over that of a year ago. It's conceivable that in coming years, we'll be spending $100 million ness indeed. Meanwhile, problems of consumer protection already have arisen, for there are 85 to 100 seat belt brands on the market now and by no means do all meet the Society of Automotive Engineer's minimum safety standards strength, color fastness, etc. To avoid buying a poor quality, "unproduct, buy only belts right now is the controversy over which carry the SAE's mark.

The trend toward compulsory installation is growing. Wisconsin law already re quires front seat belts on all 1962 cars. This year four more states passed laws to require the belts. Mississippi and Virginia on 1963 models; Rhode Island on 1964 models; New York on 1965 modthe auto in many safety experts believe voluntary persuasion campaigns will be far more effective, for a person who voluntarily installs a belt is much more likely to use it than who gets the belt with the car. Studies show that only 5 per cent of belts in cars automatic

Job Of Gland Mainly Is To Regulate Metabolism Of Body

Dear Dr. Steingrohn: Will the size of the thyroid give us any lead as to how it is? Is operation always necessary?--Mrs. L.

'Don't Vote' Campaign

When Adolf Hitler was the ruling dictator of Germany, before he launched World War II and sealed his own death warrant, one of his favorite schemes was to conduct what he called plebiscites. These presumably were elections to disclose the will of the people but the catch was that the people always had to vote the way he wanted them to.

After a few of these elections, the Germans labeled them "ja plebiscites." This meant that the only way the people could vote was

Orville Freeman, United States secretary of agriculture, is now staging a "ja plebiscite" for wheat growers. On August 30, according to a Freeman decree, wheat growers will go to the polls to select the minimum government support price of wheat for the 1963 crop. Unless they vote the way Freeman wants them to, they will be given a smashing economic jolt.

Thus far Freeman has not reached the point at which Hitler arrived. Germans who voted against the Hitler program faced the stark prospect of no jobs and no food, since all jobs were in the hands of the government and the food had to be obtained with government stamps. That, apparently, is a purpose for which Freeman is striving, for he has made it evident frequently that he is impatient with letting the people have anything to say about the government's operations.

For a number of years and especially since Freeman took office, farmers have been showing an increasing dislike of government farm control programs. Nevertheless, a majority of the wheat growers who cast ballots undoubtedly will choose the highest price, which will be calculated around a maximum of $1.82 a bushel, tied to mar-

Powell.

Murphy aspires to be the first Catholic elected to the Senate from New Hampshire, and is making a strong play for that vote. Young and likable, he is campaigning hard, and using to the utmost his senatorial free mailing privilege to bombard the voters. But he lacks the organized political backing of his rivals, and is definitely trailing them.

Mrs. Bridges, second wife of her late husband, is attractive, brainy, forceful and, on occasion, razor - tongued. She has a bustling campaign organization, formed around ardent partisans of her husband, and is counting heavily on the women's vote. But there are significant indications she won't get as much of it as

The polls indicate this campaign line also isn't wowing the voters. Merrow has labor backing, and is aggressively after the Catholic vote. That is supremely important, as New Hampshire's Catholic population is now 45 per cent. Merrow has been a congressman since 1943, and has high committee seniority there. He is risking that in the confident hope he can win the senatorial nomination - and he has a first-rate chance to do it.

So has Bass, who has been a congressman since 1955. A young former banker, whose paternal grandfather was Lincoln's Illinois rampaign manager and whose father was a governor of New Hampshire, Bass belongs to the moderate wing of the GOP. He for President Kennedy's trade liberalization bill, and has supported other administration measures. This has brought considerable disapproval from oldline Republicans, but a lot of support from rank - and - file voters, particularly independents.

Six candidates are running for the Republican nomination for Merrow's House seat, and three for Bass'. Of the six aspirants for Merrow's place, three are former Bridges employes.

are losing their jobs. Look at it from another standpoint. Under foreign aid, the U. built modern textile plants in many underdeveloped areas. The argument offered in defense of this practice was that these areas couldn't buy U. S. textiles anyway, being too poor. By building the plants, the U. S. would provide work for people and the modern plants would produce cheaply for the home market. The improved standard of living would provide a market for other U. S. manufactured goods and everybody would be happy.

What happened? The govern-ments in these underdeveloped areas decided that by selling cotton goods in the U.S they would get valuable American dol So textile manufacturers and workers have cast their bread upon the waters and got ten in return an economic black eye. (The same applies to steel producers who face competition from foreign rolling mills paid

Seat Belt Story

Industry May Have Grossed $13.5 To $22.5 Million In Year

On the drive home from my first automobile accident (luckily a minor one) a few weeks ago, I stopped at the neighborhood garage and ordered a set of two front-seat belts installed immediately. For -- even before I heard the doctor who patched me up say that "belts would have saved one-third of those brought into this hospital with fatal auto injuries" -- I knew I wouldn't have been hurt as much as I was had a belt been holding me firmly in the seat behind the Now, having bought my handsome red belts - to match the red upholstery of my white convertible, of course - and having discovered not only how much safer I feel but also how much belts remind me to drive carefully - I have been looking into The Seat Belt Story. It's a surprisingly big business story with many unexpected aspects. Here

It is big bustness. The estimate of the Auto Industries Highway Safety Committee is that, in 1961 alone, seat belt production totaled 4.5 million units. With manufacturers charging $3 to $5 a belt, this suggests the industry last year grossed between $13.5 and $22.5 million. And with the price to consumers ranging from $6 to $10 a belt installed, this means we might have spent up to $45 million for belts in the 12 months. We didn't spend nearly as much, though, for installations are still well below production.

But installation of seat belts is rapidly gaining momentum and this will continue. An active campaign to educate us on their use is being jointly pushed by the auto industry, the American Medical Assn., the National Safety Council, the U. S. Public Health Service and, most importantly, the General Federation of Women's Clubs via its "Women's Crusade for Seat Belts."

The Advertising Council backing installations with public service advertising messages The decision by U.S. automakers to pre-punch front seat anchorage holes in all 1962 models has been a major spur. The American Safety Equipment Co., which makes the Hickok brand seat belt for all Dodge Cars, reports it produced 80,000 belts in December last year against only 9,000 in January of 1961. Dodge alone says its dealers are order ing belts now at a rate 25 times over that of a year ago. It's conceivable that in coming years, we'll be spending $100 million annually for belts. It's big busi-

Meanwhile, problems of consumer protection already have arisen, for there are 85 to 100 seat belt brands on the market now and by no means do all meet the Society of Automotive Engineer's minimum safety standards for strength, color fastness, etc. To avoid buying a poor quality, "unright now is the controversy over which carry the SAE's mark.

The hottest story in seat belts voluntary or compulsory installation, and on this very day, Friday, Aug. 24, a special Highway Safety Forum is being held in Manhattan under the sponsorship of Dodge and Amvets (the veterans' organization) to dig into the question. The trend toward compulsory installation is growing. Wisconsin law already requires front seat belts on all 1962 cars. This year four more states passed laws to require the belts: Mississippi and Virginia on 1963 Rhode Island on 1964 models; New York on 1965 models. But the auto industry and many safety experts believe voluntary persuasion campaigns will be far more effective, for a person who voluntarily installs a belt is much more likely to use it than one who gets the belt with the cent of belts in cars automati ally equipped with them are fast-

There's no doubt that belts reduce injuries; the AMA estimates 10,000 killed on highways in 1960 would have lived if they had been wearing belts. Dr. James L. Malfetti, head of Columbia University's Safety Research Project who will moderate the Dodge-Amvets forum, adds that, "While the prime purpose is to prevent injuries when crashes do occur, also important is the fact that a fastened seat belt instills caution in the driver.

And now that I have become a dedicated belt fastener, here's my contribution to the campaign aimed at bachelors particularly For you know what I've found out, men? A seat belt is a sub tle way you can measure one proportion of your female com panion. In the past few weeks of fastening the belt next to the dri ver, I've learned that L's hips are two inches broader than mine, G's are an inch smaller and wow. is B bigger below than

Rusk Briefs Canadians On Berlin Crisis

OTTAWA (UPI) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Friday the new Berlin talks proposed by the Western powers would be held "on the operating level" within Berlin itself.

"These tensions within the city are very local and can be handled by operating levels at the scene," he told newsmen after three hours of talks with Canadian leaders. "They're not the type of problem that would have to be handled at the foreign ministers' level.'

The mounting crisis over Berlin was the chief topic of discussion between Rusk and Prime Minis-ter John Diefenbaker, External Affairs Minister Howard Green and Defense Minister Douglas Harkness. They also covered the "general position" of the NATO alliance, the forthcoming United Nations General Assembly and Nations General Assembly and Among points on which Rusk briefed his Canadian hosts were the U.S., British and French notes handed to the Soviet Union Friday in Moscow calling for new four-power talks on the tense Berlin situation.

Following the informal discussions, Rusk left by car for the Seigniory Club at Montibello, 45 miles from here, for a loose veekend of golf and loafing, mostly loafing." He is scheduled
